Juno hits the Ground Running in 2007 The Juno Mother Earth Resources Fund Gains 11% in February

New York, NY – March 15, 2007

The Juno Mother Earth Resources Fund produced stellar results in February returning an estimated 10.32% in its offshore fund and approximately 11% on the domestic fund. The Fund is designed to profit from short-to-medium term market trends in both commodities and equities.

“Our performance is generated from short-term tactical trading around long term convictions, which enabled us to sell most of our futures contracts and take profits intra month. Much of this decision was prompted by our CIO, Roland Jansen who also advises the Chinese government on their energy and commodity policies, thus avoiding the February 27th Chinese market correction”, said Joseph Di Virgilio, Co-Founder and Equity Portfolio Manager.

The fund invests in commodities as well as equity securities of companies around the world involved directly or indirectly in the production, refinement, distribution, exploration and research of natural resources, non tradable commodities, as well as renewable & alternative energy, including companies with an environmental focus. This includes companies that provide services to or may benefit from developments in the global resources sector and its future evolution.

“One cutting edge comes from full recognition of what can be termed the Petro-Keynesian growth economy. This is the de facto globalized world economy, pushed by higher resource and energy prices, and pulled by emerging economies”, said Andrew McKillop, Senior Vice President and Head of Research at Juno Mother Earth Asset Management.

“The fund’s unique investment approach is ideal for fund of funds, family offices and institutional investors as it provides true diversification to their existing portfolios and access to a well researched basket of actively managed commodities”, said Eugenio Verzili, Co-Founder and Executive Director.
